Sony plans to announce more on Airpeak in the Spring of 2021.

In a very short press release Sony announced Airpeak and said the goal of the project will be to support video creators “to the fullest extent possible.” This language seems to indicate that Sony plans to release drones across the consumer range much like DJI, with products priced in the low few hundreds through large-scale drone systems designed for high-end professional use.

Sony has announced a new project for drones in the field of AI robotics under the brand name Airpeak. The company says that through Airpeak, it will “contribute to the further evolution and the creation of unprecedented value” through its imaging and sensing technologies.

Nikon will cut more than 2,000 workers outside of Japan by March of 2022 as well as shift some of its production from its factory in the Miyagi province of Japan to Thailand. The changes come as the company grapples with the rise of smartphones and the effects of the coronavirus pandemic.
