FAA Slaps Drone Pilot with $182,000 in Fines for a Myriad of Violations

Originally reported early in December, a drone pilot was hit with a set of fines from the FAA for over $182,000, penalties that he could have avoided if he heeded prior FAA warnings.

The proposed penalty letter lists at least 26 times when the drone pilot flew around the Philadelphia area from December 2019 to August 2020. During those flights, the FAA is alleging that the pilot violated multiple regulations at the same time on each flight. This is how you can rack up a $182k fine pretty quickly.

This individual published a large number of videos on YouTube where he shows screenshots of the ground control station that has all sorts of things like altitude, the drone's distance from the pilot, the drone's location on a map, direction of flight, and many more pieces of info.

With these videos, the FAA has many of the pieces of the puzzle to do a prosecution and just needs to figure out the approximate time. This is why in the letter the 26 events all start with "On or about" so as to leave some wiggle room.

A struggling photographer recently published a Tweet in a last-ditch effort to find some work, and the Hail Mary paid off in a big way: Oprah Winfrey saw it and Tweeted him a job offer.
