A Minute of Silence

RIP

Fujifilm has announced that it will be discontinuing a few more film products. The latest to be axed are Fujicolor 160NS Professional 120 film and Velvia 50 in 4×5 and 8×10 sheet sizes.

In its press release announcing the discontinuation, Fujifilm explains that it was forced to make the decision because it can no longer (affordably?) obtain certain ingredients used to make its film stocks.

The grand prize of £2,500 (about $3,430), “Close-Up Photographer of the Year” trophy, and the first place in the “Insects” category were awarded to photographer Pål Hermansen for his striking image of various insects discovered in a defective lamp on the side of his house in Norway, shown above.

Theft x Inspiration

African Women in Photography

@AFWomenInPhoto

And in another case of theft... photographer Andrea Sacchetti is showing work at the Milan Photo Festival that looks eerily similar to @aidamuluneh's work! Inspiration is one thing but plagiarism is just unacceptable!

AIDA MULUNEH

After hundreds of retweets, the Festival issued a statement on their Instagram account [which has since been deleted], acknowledging the “identical” image. However, they further state that “there was no will to plagiarize against such a prestigious author and we know that the young photographer has already apologized to the author.”

Good Memories from 2020

Inspiration: Interesting Photo, Knowledge

Our 2020 as a Group lives all these years as 2020 can become good memories behind, and not what the idea behind our 2020 magazine. During the year we met in person or virtually and put our creative juices to work, rendering some great not images and fond memories. The gorgeous pages show a little of...
